

Plain Language G.R.I.D.

If the answer to more than three of these questions is no, many adults with low literacy skills may find the material difficult to read and use.

Grade Level:
\square Y \square N	Is the information written at a 6th grade level or below?
Relevance:
\square Y \square N	Is the information accurate, up-to-date, and complete?
\square Y \square N	Is the information what your client needs and wants to know?
	Is the information sensitive to your client's gender, age, and cultural or ethnic background?
Interest:
\square Y \square N	Is the information written in a friendly and conversational style?
\square Y \square N	Is the information organized in a logical way?
\square Y \square N	Is the information written in plain words?
\square Y \square N	Are important ideas or key messages repeated?
D esign:
\square Y \square N	Does the design make good use of white space?
\square Y \square N	Is the font size 12 point or larger?
\square Y \square N	Is the text written in serif font?
\square Y \square N	Does the text have a ragged, rather than justified right margin?
\square Y \square N	Do illustrations help make the message clear?
\square Y \square N	Are the illustrations properly labeled and the caption close to the picture?

Resource: Excerpt from Health Disparities Collaborative website at: http://www.healthdisparities.net